Blenheim, site
Newburg

c. 1835

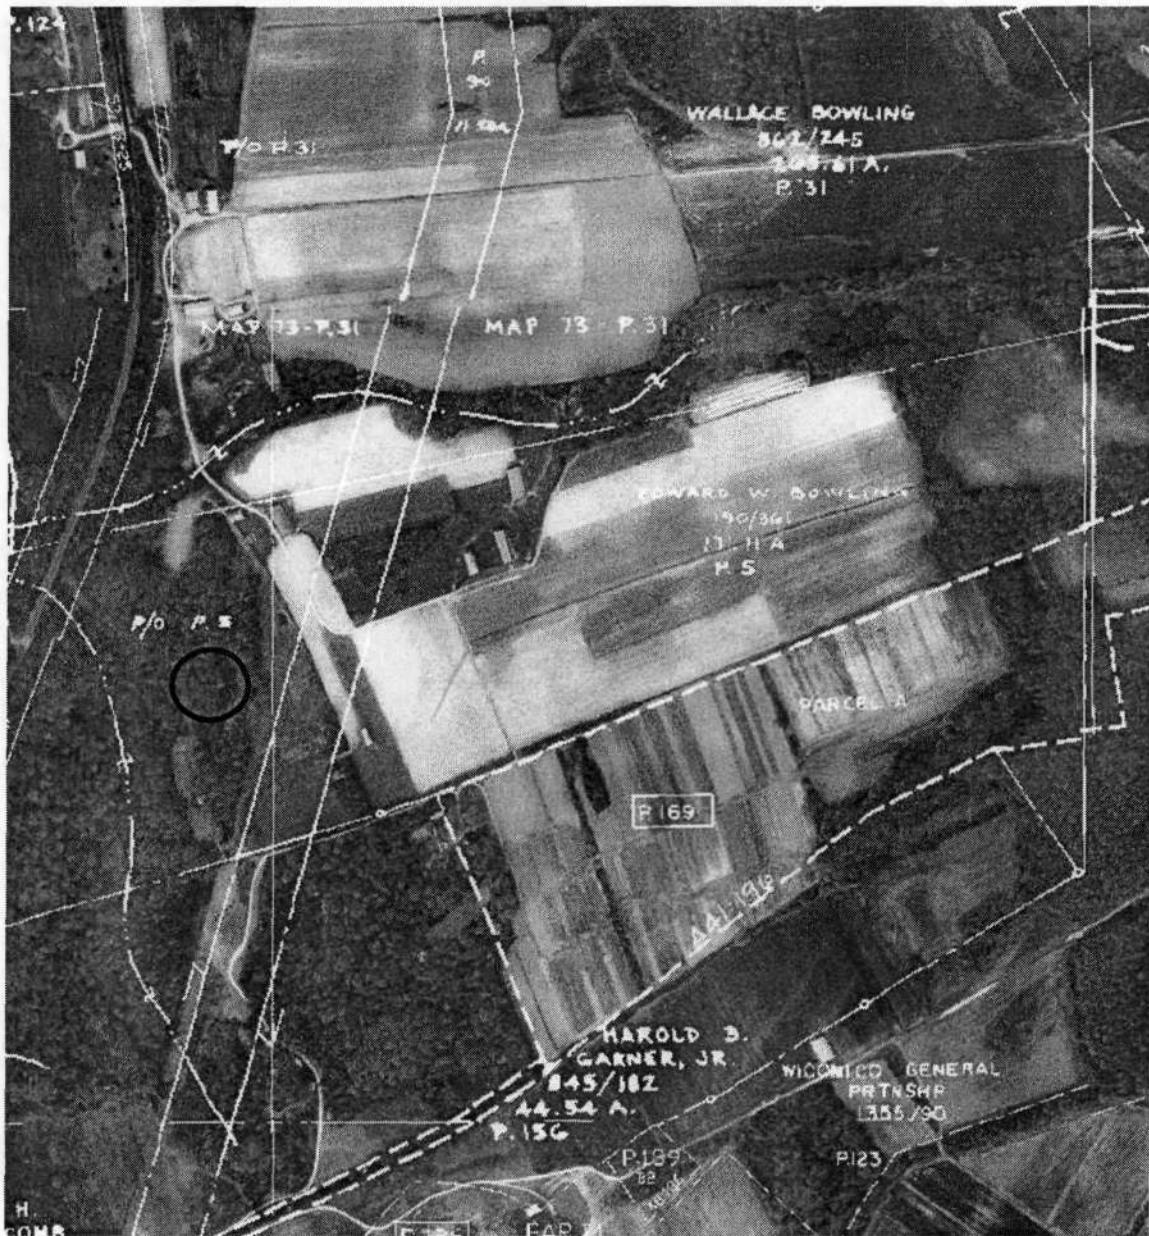

Destroyed by fire in 1970, Blenheim was a two-story frame house with a large center hall and flanking double parlors. At the north end was a one-story frame kitchen wing original to the main block. At each end of the main block were two mismatched and ill-designed brick chimneys. This was not the Blenheim mansion of the Lee family. That structure was of brick construction, burned during the Civil War, and stood on a site approximately one mile southwest of this structure.
